About the IM School

Since 1991, the IM School of Healing Arts has offered training for those interested in their own health and wholeness, as well as for those who wish to develop or deepen their skills as healing arts practitioners. The emphasis is on personal evolution and self-mastery, with the aim of learning to embody spiritual principles in our lives. We see this as the foundation for healership, whether a person practices healing on a professional basis or serves in other ways.

Teaching takes place in an interactive setting where students participate as members of a community and come to perceive a fuller picture of their current reality and their higher potentials. The school's approach is holistic, working on many levels. The practice of healing at the highest level includes connection to the personality (body, emotions, mind), as well as to the individual's spiritual essence. We believe that it is important to be healing ourselves in order to assist others in the healing process.
